

Mad Folk News

Summer Sing-alongs are Back!

Following a decade-long tradition, Mad Folk will host Summer Sing-alongs at Blue Mounds State Park. The all-ages summer sings will be held at 7:30 pm the third Friday of June and August, and the fourth Friday in July at the main shelter at the top of the hill at the park. Tim Sharpe and Rex Loker will co-lead the first June 15th sing. The view of the setting sun is usually magnificent from that vantage point, and the company is great. All are welcome to come early (6:30 pm) and join in a potluck picnic at the tables in the shelter.

Copies of the song lyric books Rise Up Singing and Rise Again will be available so that everyone can participate. All are invited to bring their folk instruments, especially their voice boxes!

Although a state park daily or annual sticker is required to enter the park, the Sing-alongs are free, thanks to the Madison Folk Music Society and Friends of Blue Mounds State Park's sponsorship, and the song leaders' generous contribution of their time and talent.

So mark your calendars for June 15th, July 27, and August 17.

In case of dangerous weather conditions, the sings will be moved to the indoor Friends of Blue Mounds shelter, to which the gatekeepers can direct you.

To get to Blue Mounds State Park from the Madison area, take 18-151 west from the Beltline. After passing turnoffs for Verona, Mount Horeb, and the Cave of the Mounds, turn right on Highway F, and then left on ID, following brown state park signs right through the village of Blue Mounds and on up the hill.

A Summer Series At A Charming Venue!

Ken Lonquist will be anchoring a summer-long series of folk shows at The School Grounds Coffee House in Cottage Grove on their outdoor deck. Each show will follow a Door-County-style Friday Fish Boil. Ken's shows will be focused on particular albums or themes. The Stellanovas, The Bindlestiffs and The Honey Pies, among others, will also be part of the summer series.

In addition, an every-other-Saturday morning family brunch show will run from 10 - 11:30 AM.

Family music will also be part of the summer proceedings. In addition to the fish boil extravaganzas, an every-other-Saturday morning family brunch concert will run from 10 - 11:30 AM. I'll be following the same ALBUM or THEMATIC focus (Welcome 2 Kenland, Earthy Songs, Lost Songs Of Kenland, etc.).

Hope you'll come out and support this great new venue for acoustic music! And... come willing to sing!

AMERICA'S FAVORITE FOLK SINGER - RAMBLIN' DEANO

SELF RELEASED - 2018

Review by Kiki Schueler

Dean Schlabowske picked a funny time for a solo record, and an unabashedly folk record at that. Not only has he spent his entire musical career as a member of a band, but it isn't exactly a lucrative move. He admits as much on "There's No Money in this Game," track two of America's Favorite Folk Singer. Schlabowske is probably best known as a member of the gloriously unhinged and high energy insurgent country band The Waco Brothers, the flagship band of Chicago's Bloodshot Records. Over the years he also fronted the similar leaning Dollar Store, and most recently TV White, formed while he was living in Austin as an "outlet for his noisier pop side." With Folk Singer, under the moniker Ramblin' Deano, he strips things down, way down, recording the guitar and vocals on his computer using one cheap microphone. Its lo-fi origins are pretty obvious, but that is just part of the charm. For now the songs the songs are available to stream or download for free, with the hopes that if you like it you'll consider hitting the "donate" button. If enough folks do, volume two just might be a high production affair.

The trick this record pulls off so well is that it sounds like its inspiration, the folk revival records of the 50's and 60's (Bob Dylan is an obvious reference), but the lyrics are quite definitely of the moment. The afore-mentioned "There's No Money in this Game" bemoans the state of the music business, "I'm dying of exposure since they set the music free." It's a well known, well worn, lament, but Schlabowske isn't whining, he's just pointing out the obvious. And it isn't just the music business, it's all the arts. "Long, long years in college in debt for my degree, I'm writing for the paper, the one nobody reads. I'm following the money but a ghost is hard to see. The truth you have to pay for, while the bullshit it is free." There's an obvious political bent, witness "The President is Out of His Goddamn Mind," but it is balanced with whimsy ("Danny Built a Spaceship"), humor ("The Racist Barber"), and clever twists on the traditional folk song. In the case of the former, he scores points for a great opening line, "I had to work on Labor Day, the irony is not lost on me. Kinda takes the joy out of getting drunk on Sunday." Despite the title, the song actually focuses more on the shortcomings of the narrator and his generation, especially when compared to the "greatest generation" of the 60's, than on the headlines proclaiming the song's title.

Ramblin' Deano's answer to "This Land is Your Land" is the grumpy old man complaint "Get Off My Land." He laments the plight of the working man and the shortage of good jobs in "Fulfillment Center," where he points out that it "is ironically named." Without naming any names, he makes it clear that working for Amazon ("anything you can dream of can be put in a box, made in the East by kids and robots") was not the future he was promised. It also signals the end of the traditional factory job, "At 6 am third shift bars open their doors. They fill up though there ain't a third shift no more." "The Corporate Band" details the one way a person can make money in the music business, as a band for hire. "Dressed to the nines, we play the tunes you should hear. We're easy on the eyes, we're easy on the ears." The a capella "Racist Barber" gives you a choice between paying too much at "the salon, or the retro hipster barber with the indie soundtrack on," or getting a haircut that may come with unwanted opinions.

Schlabowske claims that the songs are built around simple chord progressions, but they sure don't sound simple to me. He also claims he doesn't know why at 52 he decided to become a solo artist, but I think I do. We needed these songs, we just didn't know it.

Appalachian Singing in Sacred Spaces

Saturday, July 7
1-4 pm Workshop
7 pm Concert

Michael & Carrie Kline

Michael and Carrie Kline spent decades in the mountains of West Virginia, documenting the music and stories of the area's residents. They have recorded thousands of interviews and spoken testimonials that give voice to people normally excluded from public conversations. As a performing duet, the Klines mingle stirring harmonies with interweaving guitar runs and cross-chording to produce an authentic sound that captures and conveys the spirit of the people and mountains they love to sing about. They address mountain music as social history expressing a level of truth seldom available on the printed page.

Singing Workshop

- Learn to sing traditional songs of Appalachian families
- New & experienced singers welcome
- Gain insight into the complexity that is Appalachia
- Delve into ancient ballads with deep connections to the culture, landscapes and history of the Allegheny Highlands and the coalfields of Appalachia
